75 years of quality from HINDERMANN

From newcomer to traditional brand. HINDERMANN.

75 years ago, Hugo Hindermann founded a company in Delbrück, Westphalia, that produced flexible protective covers for office equipment and technical devices. Since then, HINDERMANN has become a traditional brand. Then and now, high-quality German-made precision has always guaranteed end products that are second to none – a principle we have continued to pursue and intensify over the years.

We are proud that our core products have contributed to our strong position in the market, while many people have also played their part over the years. We would like to take this opportunity to say a special 'Thank you!' for the loyalty of our staff, business partners, suppliers and customers.

I particularly recommend the interview with Manfred Hindermann on p.76 of the Magazine section of our new Product Catalogue, which looks at HINDERMANN's company history. Besides this, you will also find our regular Camping News and glimpses at the lives of people from the wonderful world of camping. Scan the QR codes next to the products to go directly to the detailed descriptions on our website. And we happily repeat what we've said before: we want to hear your opinion! You are more than welcome to send us your suggestions or constructive criticism by e-mail to service@hindermann.de.

We are as motivated as ever to offer you high-quality product solutions for your travels. We combine modern technology and human craftsmanship to deliver impressive precision which we are proud to call reliable HINDERMANN quality. Mobile travel connects people, and we share this connection with you. Now and in the future!

Best wishes from Westphalia

Experience the seasons at pleasant temperatures

Thermal protection

Thermal and sun protection for mobile homes and caravans

Taking to the road in every season is also a question of equipment. Good climate protection or shading make your motor home especially comfortable. This is true for windy autumn days, sub-zero temperatures in wintertime or hot, sunny summer days.

Our specially combined mats and tarpaulins insulate against the cold in winter and keep the sun's rays out in the summer. The entire vehicle remains significantly warmer in cold weather and heats up noticeably less in summer. Our "air conditioning apparatus" is not only simple and intelligent, but also works silently without consuming any energy.

Thermal window mat LUX

For vans, alcove vehicles, fully and semi-integrated vehicles

The one-piece HINDERMANN thermal window mats LUX provide not only ideal heat insulation for winter travel, but also effective protection against the sun's rays in the summertime. When used in winter, the outer insulation increases the surface temperature on the inside of the panes, thereby considerably reducing the risk of condensation forming inside the vehicle.

If the window mat is closed in summer, the sun's rays cannot penetrate the glass pane in the first place, so the interior will not heat up so easily. In beautiful sunny winter weather, the front flap can be opened, allowing the sunshine to additionally heat up the interior and reduce the camping fan's energy costs

Snap fasteners and keder track for integrated vehicles

In integrated vehicles, the insulation mat is attached on the driver's side with an inside pocket and on the passenger side either with LOXX press studs (included) or a keder track (not included). Here, a textile e keder is attached along the top edge and a separate second keder with a broad Velcro strip is included in delivery.

Highlights

- ✓ Protects against heat and cold
- ✓ Vehicle-specific form
- ✓ Provides insulation and ensures privacy
- ✓ Prevents condensation

Extension module LUX DUO

For vans, alcove vehicles, fully and semi-integrated vehicles

HINDERMANN has developed the extension module LUX DUO to prevent cold drafts from passing through the non-insulated engine compartment, the wheel arches and the footwell even in the winter months. This lower part is connected to the window with a built-in Velcro strip at the top. The extension is made of the same material as the window mat, but it is slightly thinner to save volume when travelling. There is an additional wind guard with built-in eyelets at the bottom edge, creating a complete two-part thermal insulation for the entire cab – in combination with the top part of the HINDERMANN thermal window mat LUX – which effectively keeps out the cold.

Bicycle protection cover UNIVERSAL ZWOO

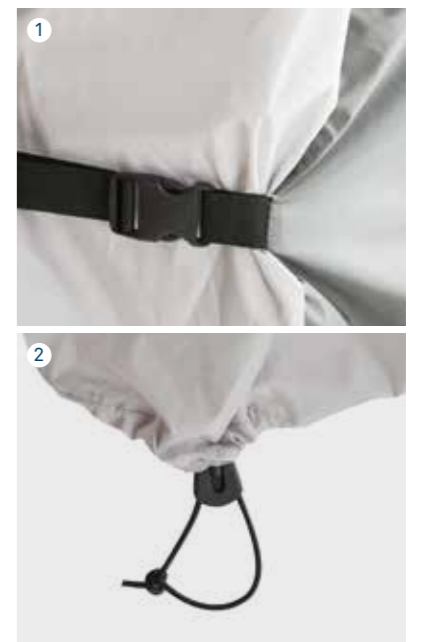

With reflective stripes and PU coating

The HINDERMANN protective bicycle cover UNIVERSAL ZWOO is designed primarily for bike racks mounted on tow bars, but its box shape allows it to be used universally. It is pulled over the bikes from above. Along the lower edge is an incorporated hollow seam with an elastic drawstring. The cover features a transparent pocket for the warning sign (not included) for use on a motorhome.

- ✓ Up to two bicycles, will also fit an additional child's bicycle on a third rail
- ✓ Size XL is designed for three adult bicycles
- ✓ Handlebars do not need to be turned parallel to the frames

To ensure that the cover sits tightly and is securely attached, we recommend HINDERMANN's belt system, item no. 8950-2350, with hooks on both sides to attach to the eyelets on the transparent pocket. → P. 123.

SUPRA made of Tyvek®

Our breathable protective tarpaulins

Breathable protective tarpaulins made of Tyvek® are invaluable all year round due to the material's ability to help preserve the value of a motorhome. This tear-resistant, durable HDPE fabric can lie directly on top of the vehicle and remains breathable even under snowy conditions. Made with Tyvek® by the innovative DuPont Group in Luxemburg.

Breathable

Tyvek® is breathable, so it prolongs the service life of certain products, protects valuable works of art against condensation damage and protects vehicles against rust.

Water-resistant

Tyvek® is water-resistant. It prevents external moisture from entering, while allowing internal moisture to escape at the same time.

Pliable

Tyvek® has a soft surface, so it is particularly gentle on packed goods.

Resilient

The sum of its physical properties makes Tyvek® an unparalleled material. It is strong, tear-proof and can also withstand extreme loads.

Reusable

Protective covers and storage covers made of Tyvek® can be cleaned and used multiple times.

Simple to process

Tyvek® is easy to work with and can be readily cut, glued, sewn, punched and stitched. If required, it can be furnished with eyelets, Velcro fasteners, loops or press studs.

Recyclable

Tyvek® is 100 per cent recyclable and can be used to make a wide variety of products.

Light

Tyvek® weighs significantly less than comparable materials. As it requires hardly any storage space, it also saves additional costs.

Roof tarpaulin SUPRA

DU PONT
Tyvek

Made of Tyvek® for vans

HINDERMANN's light and pliable roof tarpaulin SUPRA can be easily stowed away into a small package, yet offers outstanding protection from sun, rain, snow and dirt. It protects the coating and material of the entire roof surface, ensures that the rubber seals of skylights remain flexible and stops upholstery from fading.

Breathable protective tarpaulins made of Tyvek® are invaluable all year round, and the outstanding physical properties of the material help preserve the value of the motorhome. This tear-resistant, durable HDPE fabric can lie directly on top of the vehicle and remains breathable even under snowy conditions. It can also be washed and recycled.

Together, HINDERMANN's roof and front tarpaulin SUPRA (p. 46) provide weatherproof and durable protection for vans and motorhomes

Vehicle cover WINTERTIME

Customized forms for motorhomes, vans and caravans

HINDERMANN's vehicle cover WINTERTIME is made of SFS NONWOVEN material. The breathable membrane offers both high tear-resistance and low weight and is far superior in quality to conventional films or fabric-reinforced tarpaulins.

This water-resistant vehicle cover is cheaper than any type of outdoor shelter and offers motorhomes, camper vans and caravans year-round protection against sun, rain, snow and dirt. With five different patterns and a variety of versions with different dimensions to choose from, you will be sure to find the right protective cover for your fully-, semi- or compactly integrated motorhome (with or without alcove) or camper van from different manufacturers. A particularly practical feature: four zippers allow access at all times – no need to remove the cover.

Manfred Hindermann looks back on 47 exciting years as Managing Partner

75 years of Hindermann

The Hindermann team met Manfred Hindermann to talk about the company's history. As a member of the 2nd generation, he was familiar with the company's beginnings as a child. Passion and courage are required to turn a small workshop into a medium-sized industrial company.

When did you join your father Hugo's business?

On 2nd January 1975, when I'd just turned 24. My father founded a rubber goods company called 'Hugo Hindermann Gummiwarenfabrik' in 1949. Even when I was still at school, I often accompanied my father in the factory and was pretty familiar with everything there. When I was about 16, he taught me bookkeeping, and later payroll accountancy. Back then, we were a small family company and did everything ourselves. I worked in internal and field sales at a larger company that we had a friendly relationship with. And this year, in 2024, we can celebrate HINDERMANN's 75th anniversary.

What was it like when you first joined the company?

My father was very ill at the time, so he couldn't play an active part in the company's development. I was pretty much on my own, so the first thing I did was hire some staff, and then I succeeded in acquiring new customers to generate growth for the company. In those days, our product range was restricted exclusively to flexible protective covers for office equipment and medical or optical devices. More or less everyone who had a typewriter – no matter what German manufacturer it came from – probably came across a Hindermann protective cover at one time or another. Of course, we also developed new ideas and extruded PVC profiles such as carrier belts and garden hoses, from waste film in a separate department.

When did you branch out into the camping industry?

Right, we manufactured the company's first tow bar covers in 1976.

What gave you the idea to produce accessories for the camping market?

On my business trips, I had often noticed those yellow tow bar covers printed with dealer advertisements. They were flexible covers with a welded seam, a bit like the articles we sold large quantities of – in different shapes and colours – as camping industry suppliers. As I was keenly interested, I visited numerous caravan dealers in Hesse and North Rhine-Westphalia in 1976. I asked them not only about the requirements for tow bar covers, but also for other product suggestions for the camping market.

You were a young, relatively inexperienced entrepreneur then – how did people react?

All the discussions I had were positive, which is why I decided to order raw films to make tow bar covers. One thing was clear to me right from the start – if I wanted HINDERMANN to succeed in the market, I would have to guarantee impeccable quality. So the film would have to be UV-stabilised and cold-resistant, have a surface structure that repelled dirt as much as possible, and not be derived from reclaimed material. These are all "silent" characteristics – they are not visible from outside and were not considered at the time, but their value only becomes apparent in the course of time..

You had very concrete ideas. How were you able to implement your high quality standards at the time?

With courage and absolute faith in the quality of the product. Mind you, the high technical standard we had set ourselves called for a high technical minimum quantity that was equivalent to several thousand tow bar covers. For us as a small company and a newcomer to the camping market, it was a "leap in the dark", but our concept of quality paid off handsomely in the end.

What differences are there between tow bar covers then and now?

In those days, tow bar covers came in different shapes and sizes from today's products. For example, there was a special cover for Tabbert and Wilk caravans because their support wheel has a particularly high crank handle. In addition, tow bars covers then were tied to the bar with four pieces of washing line. We looked for a better alternative until we finally launched the now-familiar pocket shape and rubber tensioners on the market

But even a good product has to be launched on the market first. How was your start?

I have to admit that it was quite tough at first. There were already two established companies on the market who are no longer in business, so I visited a lot of dealers to build up confidence in HINDERMANN and the quality of our products. The dealers and the camping public weren't disappointed, and the word got around - classic word-of-mouth recommendation, if you like. Step by step, we succeeded in getting a foothold in the market, and gradually more and more products followed. Over the years, I've managed to meet a good two-thirds of our dealers in person on my business trips.

Was there a particular product that "made the breakthrough" for you?

Actually, there was. When we supplied dealers with a wide range of Bolon awning carpet designs in rolls or ready-cut and packed form for several years, HINDERMANN became a familiar name in all German-speaking countries.

Can you remember your first ever tow bar cover customers?

Of course! That's something you don't forget. I'd like to give you two examples, one of them from our home territory, East Westphalia: one of our very first customers was Caravan Ullrich in Bad Salzuflen. My contact there, Rolf Schwarze, presented me with a huge challenge on my first visit. They wanted to order a large quantity of tow bar covers from us, but rather than in the standard yellow colour, in his company's own orange with a concrete RAL reference number with the company logo on it in black. I explained to him that we could do it in principle, but we needed a minimum quantity of several thousand tow bar covers for technical reasons. We would have to store these in our warehouse and he would have to take them all because of the hardly any other dealer used this special colour. 'No problem,' he said. 'I'm sure we can call them off in several batches?' And he'd need a special price in view of the large quantity. Then we started negotiating, and the first call-off was for 750 units. That would be a large order even now, let alone in the 1970s! And we repeated this deal time and time again in the ensuing years. You don't forget a special piece of business like that, particularly as we were newcomers in the market. We still have close ties with Caravan Ullrich to this day, and they still stock our entire range. I'd like to say an especially heartfelt 'Thank you!' to the Caravan Ullrich Team here.

Our first ever article, the tow bar cover, is still in our catalogue today, almost 50 years after it first appeared.

And were there already wholesale customers then?

That would have been my second example! Our first wholesale trade customer was Frankana, who were still based in Eibelstadt at that time. I can still recall how Mr. NEWMANN spoke to me in the yard just as I'd got out of the car. Eibelstadt was the destination of our first delivery of floor skirts for Frankana. Later, at the trade fair booth in Essen, he introduced me to Klmaße of Büttner, my new contact.

So floor skirts were also added to the product range?

That's right. We had become totally enthusiastic about the camping market, so we were brimming with ideas for new articles accordingly. After the tow bar covers we made floor skirts from plastic film, and shortly afterwards from the tarpaulin material with the code name -4440, which is still used today. We made the corresponding textile edging ourselves in-house. Then came protective wheel covers and thermal film insulating mats for caravan windows. The products for motorhomes only arrived a few years later. We initially made exterior insulation mats from thermal film, but they had nothing in common with the exterior insulation mats we supply now

Which "articles from yesteryear" are still part of the Hindermann product portfolio?

Our first ever article, the tow bar cover, is still in our catalogue today, almost 50 years after it first appeared. It has been optimised regularly, and new versions have been added. Actually, most of our articles are still part of the range. We have only discontinued a few lines because of the demand for them has fallen over time or they have been succeeded by optimised versions of the product. For example, we still stock exterior insulation mats for the Ducato Type 280 from model year 1982 onwards, but in an updated version. As we supply loyal customers in a market environment with a family feel, it is part of the service to ensure that product lifecycles are as long as possible.

What was your greatest challenge or problem?

There have been countless challenges in the years I've been working. Ultimately, the most significant challenge was when the purchasing habits of camping dealers changed at the beginning of the 1990s and we switched from simply selling products to offering advice on them.

What exactly do you mean?

In the past, caravan dealers usually bought most of their accessories directly from the manufacturer, that is, directly from HINDERMANN, but when the industry started to boom, there was a constant stream of new vehicle models and a wide range of leisure-time and holiday articles. As a result, there was an enormous increase in demand from the specialist dealers, while smaller quantities were ordered on a more regular basis. These requirements are met by the familiar specialist wholesalers, some of them with their own fleet of delivery trucks. We have adapted to these developments. The situation at the outset was different for us. Because of the tow bar covers with individual advertising logos, we had to talk directly to the specialist dealers anyway, so orders for articles from what was then a relatively small range of products were also placed at the same time.

Manfred and Tobias Hindermann,
2nd and 3rd generation in discussion

Tobias Hindermann in discussion with head of purchasing Thomas Rath.

What do you like most about the camping business?

The atmosphere is relaxed and we trust each other. If a partner promises something, they will deliver with no ifs or buts. Apart from that, the industry is connected with leisure and holidays, so campers are usually relaxed, cheerful folk. What other industry deals with a target group where most people are supposed to be relaxed and cheerful? Nevertheless, this still presents a challenge to the dealers and their employees, who all strive to offer the best possible service, but we have always had a good, trusting working relationship all through the years. It's a great privilege to work in an industry like this, which I like to think of as one big camping family.

Are things different today from what they used to be?

They certainly are. The digitalisation of the company has enabled us to achieve different and much better results now. Some examples: the precise mapping of the three-dimensional contours of a section of vehicle bodywork, or the correspondingly accurate work of a cutting machine or stitch-perfect sewing and seaming. None of that would have been possible in the old days. The question of "social media" has become increasingly important in recent years. It has created new ways of obtaining and exchanging information, which has in turn created more impulses and motivation to buy. Naturally, we are an integral part of this system here at HINDERMANN, so we can receive and transwith information and communicate via several different channels.

And how has camping as a holiday form changed?

It has definitely enjoyed a boom. People have become much more aware not only of the need to conserve the wonders of our natural environment, but also of the impact of our ecological footprint when we go on holiday, for example. Especially where the ecological footprint is concerned, the world of camping and travelling in a caravan or motorhome offers significant benefits.

Has the industry also changed over the years?

The development of versatile motorhomes and camper vans has attracted new, younger target groups, resulting in unprecedented growth. The quality of RV fixtures and fittings has constantly risen, with countless detailed innovative solutions in combination with more aesthetically pleasing materials. The accessories supplied by our company are constantly involved here, too, whereby HINDERMANN has been developing and supplying OEM-specific products for countless vehicle manufacturers for the last 15 years. The size and variety of the range of products we have to offer mean that we need to keep much higher quantities in stock – everything from raw materials purchased well in advance to the packed end products themselves. This is the only way to ensure that we can deliver to our trading partners on time. It was during the coronavirus pandemic, when supply chains were failing everywhere, that our strategy really proved its worth.

Did corona lead to changes?

Communication has changed and become much faster. Corona precautions also meant we had to hold more on-line meetings, although face-to-face, personal contact with our trade partners is still as vitally important as ever.

What is still the same as it was then?

What hasn't changed is that customers still expect quality, consistency, reliability and honest product advice.

What makes you feel particularly proud?

Having worked in the business for 47 years, I am really pleased about the continued popularity of our products and the unwavering trust that campers and dealers have in the quality of our products and our working relationship with one another. As a result, we now employ around 68 people at our Delbrück site, and it is our policy to do everything we can to offer secure jobs. I am also very grateful that our son Tobias is developing our family company very successfully in the third generation – with the passion and customer-oriented approach that are part of our company's DNA

Do you get regular feedback from the market?

We – that is to say, the entire workforce – see the daily arrival of new orders as recognition for all the past development work, the regular unspectacular product optimisations and many years of proven reliability and good working relationship with all our partners. We have an outstanding team, every one of whom is extremely hard-working and creative – something which is not always in tune with modern trends. This is a situation which cannot be taken for granted, and the management is very grateful that things are as they are.

Many thanks for taking us on a journey through HINDERMANN's history!

It was a pleasure! I'd like to thank our team for its interest in HINDERMANN's history and progress. It was also interesting for me to reflect on almost 50 years of history in our MOBILE TRAVEL business area. It's been a lot of fun!

At this point, I would like to thank our campers and all our trade partners for their trust and unwaveringly good collaboration and cooperation.

Camping at Rhine Kilometre 681

A day out at Campingplatz Berger on the "Cologne Riviera"

Tracing camping back to the roots, the HINDERMANN team visits Germany's oldest campsite in Rodenkirchen, the home of the picturesque Campingplatz Berger at Rhine Kilometre 681 since 1931. Manager Bernhard Berger explains why high water and high season are not a problem.

Bernhard Berger is calmness personified. And why shouldn't he be? The true son of Cologne enjoys idyllic views of the Rhine, passing cargo ships and the sandy beach right on his doorstep for 365 days a year. There's a good reason for the affectionate nickname given to the area around Rhine Kilometre 681. 'They also call this bit here the Cologne Riviera, because of it's the only stretch – thanks to Old Father Rhine – with a sandy beach, whereas everywhere else is shingle,' explains Berger. And because of it, for him, there's no place like home, the 57-year-old shares his happiness with passionate campers from all over the world. Or at least with those who visit Campingplatz Berger in Rodenkirchen: 'In the main months from June until the end of September, we're very international. You get a miniature version of the same cross-section of tourists here as in Cathedral Square in Cologne. Really, the whole range.'

A hive of activity

Bernhard Berger can also remember the days before the camping boom. He has lived on the campsite since childhood. 'My parents had a high season of 6 weeks, but then that was it. My father had two jobs, he was a master electrician and did a bit of camping as a sideline until the 1960s.' This would be unthinkable today, because the season at Campingplatz Berger never ends. And in summer there is even more to do when large numbers of cycling tourists pitch their tents and families come to enjoy their holidays on the banks of the Rhine. At the beginning of the year, visitors to the numerous trade fairs, Cologne Carnival revellers or football fans book their pitches at the Berger's. 'You have to be ready for Easter by the time March comes, in case something has to be altered or added to the site. There are the bridge days in May, then – hey presto – it's high season before you know it. And that runs right until the first week in November,' says the site manager. Christmas market visitors then mark the end of the old year. All year round, there are campers who are working in the Cologne area and like to wind down after work in a tent or camper van at Berger's.

The Berger family welcomes you

Hotel, beer garden and restaurant – the Bergers have expanded their hospitality offer in recent years. Guests can now enjoy themselves at the on-site hotel, in the imaginatively designed beer garden or high-class restaurant. 'The structure of our site has something to do with the culinary service we offer. There are frequent changeovers, people coming and going, so folk don't set up a home-from-home so much. We are glad and well placed to offer food and drink, especially as we are close to the city and suburbs, so we have lots of off-site visitors. It's an all-round package that suits us down to the ground,' says the hotelier enthusiastically.

Open (almost) all year round

You can pitch your tent, park your motorhome or unhitch your caravan at Campingplatz Berger almost all year round. On the 5-hectare site with 300 pitches of varying size, 125 of them for permanent campers, there is just the right special place for everyone. Some permanent campers have been here for more than 50 years.

Some of them are even in the second generation – understandable enough, considering the wonderful rural setting and proximity to Cologne and its famed cathedral. 'We have been closed between Christmas and New Year for a few years now. It would probably be worth our while to stay open at Christmas, too, but you have to draw the line somewhere. Everybody understands that,' assumes Bernhard Berger, and rightly so.

The challenge of the Rhine

The Rhine undoubtedly attracts a lot of visitors, and is also the reason why Campingplatz Berger was put here in the first place. Bernhard's grandfather Jakob Berger was a keen rower himself and wanted to give other water-sport enthusiasts somewhere to store their equipment: 'The canoeists were already undertaking cross-country excursions upstream and downstream on various rivers, and then they could put their tents up here in the little meadow. Jakob quickly set up the kiosk, which initially just sold a few drinks, and that was the beginning of the campsite in 1831.' However, as beautiful as the location on the Rhine is, the other side of the coin is and remains the risk of flooding. 'These days, as we all know, the weather is totally unpredictable.' The Bergers are an experienced, well-organised team who keep their contingency plans for flooding ready to hand: 'We have about 24 hours advance warning. Up till now – and long may it remain so – we have always been able to secure everything and evacuate the site.' At the entrance to the site stands a column with an impressive record of historic water levels. As the crow flies, the Rhine is some distance away, but when one hears that floodwater has been known to reach the fanlight above the door of the reception, one can only guess at how big a challenge such a situation is. In confirmation, Bernhard Berger says: 'There are no rules with high water except one: it always happens when you need it the least.'

An out-and-out camping fan

The Bergers have had to cut many holidays short because of the threat of flooding at home, which is why the family decided to get its own caravan: 'At some point, after we'd had to check out of the hotel prematurely for the umpteenth time but still had to pay our full whack, we said: "This is daft, let's set up a caravan somewhere"'. That is how the Bergers came to be permanent campers in a caravan three hours away in a site on a small organic farm in Holland. 'Our kids absolutely love it there, too, so the caravan is occupied a lot of the time, which makes it worthwhile.' When asked what his New Year's wish for 2024, Bernhard Berger's answer comes as no surprise: 'I'm mad about camping, and lots of other people have already discovered how great camping is. I'd be happy if things stayed that way and people kept it up. Camping is simply a wonderful way to spend a holiday.'

From e-bike to classic vehicle

Although camping is not new, it has constantly changed over the years. Most vehicles, from camper van to luxury liner, are much more technologically advanced nowadays, so people notice models from the early days all the more. That goes for site manager Bernhard Berger, too. 'Sometimes you see really old caravans, vintage models that are really cute.'

Something that has almost become a classic camping "accessory" is the e-bike. 'I think that e-bike Technology has really given the camping industry a boost. Now campers can venture much further from the site and are more mobile. If you want to get into town and only have a big mobile home to drive in, you've got a problem. If you've got an e-bike, it's easy.' It's also perfect for guests at Campingplatz Berger because a cycle path runs straight past the door and Cologne Cathedral is only a 20-minute bike ride away. Grandfather Jakob could not have known it, but he picked just the right spot for the site.

Once decided on the spot, now managed by software

Nothing stays the way it was. The trend in favour of motorhomes has been developing for more than 10 years, says the campsite manager. So the structure at the Bergers' site has been adapted to meet guest requirements. 'Sometimes rain or river flooding turns the grass soft and soggy, so we can't let bigger or heavier motorhomes drive to a pitch wherever they want. That means we have to create pitches that are reinforced in one way or another. That's one thing, and pitch size is another. We have to find just the right fit. Besides camper vans and motorhomes, we still have the classic caravan. We also have a lot of touring cyclists. We have to stay flexible, even at the height of the season.' Cyclists usually bring a tent, so the Bergers need to ensure they get the structural permutations for the pitches right. To make sure they do, and to enable them to keep track, the Bergers have switched to a software solution. 'Everything was a bit more belt-and-braces then.

Everything was a bit more belt-and-braces then. When I started out, we used a bike to take every guest to the site

When I started out, we used to lead every guest to the site on a bike,' Bernhard Berger recalls happily. 'Now there are a lot more pre-bookings and the occupation rate of the site is higher, which we can manage much better with a computerised solution.'

Just drop by, I'm sure we'll find a solution

'We used to say to the guests: "Just drop by, I'm sure we'll find a solution". For years, that was our standard phrase on the phone. It served us well for a very, very long time too,' Berger recalls. But when the caravan trend really took off, fewer and fewer guests were willing to risk simply turning up in Cologne on the off-chance without a confirmed pitch reservation. This was the reason why the current software-based solution was adopted. 'That, on the other hand, calls for more staff to enter all the data. It's all well and good, and well digital, but the nature of the work has changed,' says site manager Berger. ZDigitalisation has changed a lot of things. '15 or 29 years ago, when we went on holiday and came home two weeks later, my wife could easily deal with the couple of e-mails that had arrived in the meantime. That would be unthinkable today. Now, if we're lucky and nobody interrupts us, the two of us might just manage to get it done in a day.'

We used to say to the guests, 'Just drop by, I'm sure we'll find a solution.'

Visitor traffic starts at 8 a.m.

There is no such thing as a typical day for the campsite manager. Maybe a couple of routine tasks. For example, the reception desk opens at 8 a.m., but there is plenty to do before that. 'We usually get going between quarter past and half past seven. The cash register has to be ready because we sell breakfast rolls here in the morning.' Of course, the passionate camper no longer does everything himself. Luckily, he has plenty of willing hands to help him.

'As soon as we open the door, there is guest traffic in here. We used to deal with a lot of tasks ourselves when the business was a bit smaller.' Nowadays somebody also has to look after the hotel, the restaurant and the beer garden, so the Berger family mainly deals with the administrative side of the organisation. This includes such things as personnel planning: 'We have a team of handymen who take care of the site and considers what needs to be done and where.' But Bernhard Berger is a practical man himself and sees what work needs to be done: 'We help out wherever we can. In the hotel, in the restaurant or beer garden, in the reception if there's a long queue. It varies, depending on how busy we are.'

4th generation on its way

Everything is family-run in the Bergers' business, and that is how it going to stay. 'There's going to be a generational handover. My contract is running out,' he quips. His son

Benedikt is due to take over the business, but he doesn't live on-site yet. According to his dad Bernhard, however, that is an absolute must for the site manager: 'If a guest falls ill during the night, an ambulance might be required, so you have to be on the spot. Fortunately, that doesn't happen very often, though.' Luckily, the site is big enough several generations: 'I've lived here for 57 years now, I've always lived here. Nobody's going to replant me anymore.'

In love with versatility

Bernhard Berger likes his job for many reasons, but for one in particular: 'Versatility. I couldn't run a campsite that only offers fixed pitches. The constant changes, the international aspect when you can use a language you learned at school a long time ago, that's fun.' The Berbers also enjoy having many regular guests: 'We know our guests, and luckily we have a lot of repeat offenders. That's really nice.' He also loves the skilled manual work becmade of e it is something he is particularly good at. 'We do a lot of work outside in winter, and I like this variety. I couldn't stand being stuck in an office all the time.' Berger doesn't need to think twice about what he likes the least: "Flooding."

Football fans are very welcome

Bernhard Berger welcomes many football fans to his campsite during the year who book in for one night to watch a match. The campsite is also a popular rendezvous for big footballing events. Germany is hosting the European Championship in 2024, and Bernhard Berger is well prepared: 'I've ordered tickets,' jokes the football fan. The 57-year-old's eyes light up when he thinks back to the "fairytale summer" of 2006: 'One of the best summers in my life was the summer of 2006.' And Berger is not the only one. What requires careful planning today was more the result of spontaneous impulses in 2006: 'We set up big screens so people could watch outside, but nothing was planned long in advance, it just turned out that way.' Football fans from many nations had booked into Campingplatz Berger in 2006. As the site management was unsure of what might happen if emotions got the better of people, the initial mood was a little subdued, but that soon changed: 'There they all were – Swedish, French and English – sitting here in the beer garden watching football together. I thought it was fantastic.' As a parting gift, the English fans gave him an England shirt that they had all signed: 'Since then, I've been a fan of English fans.' Berger hopes to enjoy similar scenes during the European Championship. 'I've been to the major tournaments in Portugal and France, but experiencing it all here was brilliant and unforgettable. I hope it will be the same in 2024. With good weather to match. It was peaceful, festive and fun, that was my experience. It was dead cool.'

We can only concur and hope that the summer of 2024 will be a great one, too. Our highly entertaining chat gave us a glimpse behind the scenes at life on the Cologne Riviera. With our heartfelt thanks to the Berger family, we wish them an eventful all-year season.

Hanging wardrobe

Zip front

Store your clothes with care in the HINDERMANN hanging wardrobe under the awning or at home. Hung up on a tent rod, open shelf or coat stand, the hanging wardrobe creates an airy, but dust-free, closed-off storage space where clothes can be kept separate from other gear. Garments can be hung on the integrated clothes rail.

HINDERMANN – since 1949

HINDERMANN plastic processing – our name stands for quality, as it has done for more than 70 years. We are a German family company based in Delbrück, Westphalia, where we develop our brand-name “Made in Germany” products. We are a high-performance, progressive, consistently customer-oriented specialist manufacturer of flexible insulation covers made of plastic and other technical materials. Our innovative strength is underlined by numerous utility model rights granted by the German Patents and Brands Authority DPMA and our close collaboration with reputable vehicle manufacturers.

German brand-name quality

Our business is rooted in traditional craftsmanship. In recent decades, we have risen to the challenges of the markets, optimized our production and forged ahead with innovative manufacturing technology. This knowledge is the basis of our strength today – and the cornerstone of HINDERMANN's proverbial quality.

Precision manufacturing with finesse

Our production facilities combine the precision of human craftsmanship and state-of-the art machine technology. A delicate human touch, high-quality materials and innovative processing technology form a reliable alliance. The various industries we serve appreciate the value of our leading products and ground-breaking solutions.

A strong team

While innovative processes and modern machinery are our mainstay, when it comes to personal customer advice, product development or serial manufacturing, we still believe in using the best resource that nature has to offer – the unique human spirit. Our employees are the beating heart of our business!
